Team Rocket has Arrived!

Page 8

Prepare for trouble! And make it double!
To protect the world from devastation!
To unite all peoples within our nation!
To denounce the evils of truth and love!
To extend our reach to the stars above!
Jesse!
James!
Team Rocket!
Blast off at the speed of light!
Surrender now, or prepare to fight!
Meowth says, "That's right!"

That's right Pokémon fans. Team Rocket is making their American debut in the newest Pokémon Trading Card Game from Wizards of the Coast-the Team Rocket TCG. But beware, these are not ordinary Pokémon. They've turned to the dark side due to poor training. The 82-card Team Rocket set includes such bad guys as the Dark Charizard, Dark Blastoise and the innocent-looking little Slowbro. This new TCG set adds a new dimension to becoming a Pokémon Master Trainer. To view the complete American Team Rocket checklist along with select pictures turn to page 8.

Since many of our readers enjoy looking at new and different Japanese Pokémon cards, we're shining a spotlight on the Pokémon Trading Card Vending Series 6. We've selected this set because it was the first to show images from the second Pokémon movie: Revelation Lugia. The movie and cards were released in Japan in 1999. This vending card set is extremely tough to put together, but we did it. You see this hard-to-find set on page 28.

On page 22 is our feature, Back to Basics: Part 3-Learning how to play in a tournament. Our Pokémon TCG expert, Steven Diamond, will show you how to prepare yourself for that big game. If you practice your gaming techniques and follow Mr. Diamond's rules, you too can become a Pokémon Master at the tournaments.

After you've studied the tournament techniques, you can enter our contest on page 21 to win the Pokémon Trading Card Game for Game Boy. Playing GB is a great way to practice the TCG.

Next, turn to page 34 of our Guide to the 100 New Monsters. Study them carefully. Then hop to page 73 for our Neo Contest. If you can identify the three new mystery Pokémon, you'll have a chance to win a complete unopened Neo Starter set.

After you've read all of our Pokémon pages, it's time to check out our Digimon Bonus section beginning on page 78. We've included lots of Digi stuff: a hot list, a Digimon contest, the Digi Dozen Monsters, tips on playing the Digimon card game and Digimon Kids' Creations.

If you like our Digimon section and want to see more, pick up a copy of Beckett Digimon Collector at your local card and comic shop or newsstand. In the meantime, have fun reading this exciting issue of Beckett Pokémon Collector.

Enjoy!

The Gold Meowth

I have a Meowth with a gold border instead of yellow. It doesn't look fake and I can't see through to the other side. Is this a real card?

Jay Lozy, age 14
Lincoln, Rhode Island

The card that you're describing is the Betty Crocker Pokémon Rolls fruit snacks. This card was randomly inserted into boxes of the snacks. For more information please check our price guide beginning on page 49.

Yellow Cheeks Pikachu

I have a Japanese Base Pikachu card with yellow cheeks. All of the American Pikachus I've seen have red cheeks. Is this one worth more than a red cheek Pikachu?

Montana Busch, age 12
Ellijay, Georgia

All Japanese Base Pikachus were produced with yellow cheeks. Only the American Pikachus have the cheek variation. Check our price guide for more information.

Game Boy TCG

I'm thinking of buying the new Pokémon Trading Card Game for Game Boy. Do you know if you can play against a friend?

Brent Tuttle, age 9
Amelia, Ohio

You'll be able to play with a friend using the Game Link cable. You can purchase the special cable wherever Game Boy units and cartridges are sold.

Valuable Holographics

Why are holographic Pokémon cards worth more than the regular cards?

Tanya Keenan, age 13
Boosier City, Louisiana

Holographic cards are typically the rarest cards in a set. The ratio for finding a holo in a box of boosters is one out of 33 cards or one in every three packs. The demand is higher for holographics because they also look nicer than non-holos.

Gold and Silver

When is Game Boy Pokémon Gold and Silver coming out in English?

Thomas womelsdorf, age 11
Jacksonville, North Carolina

The English version of Gold and Silver Pokémon games is scheduled for release in late September or early October.

Topps Chrome

I purchased a few packs of Topps Pokémon Chrome cards. The wrapper says Look for: Spectra-Chrome, Sparkle-Chrome and Tekno-Chrome cards. Two of my cards are holographic. How do I tell if I have a Sparkle or a Tekno-Chrome card?

Cory Smithers
Boston, Massachusetts

Pull aside your holographic-looking cards. Then turn them over to look at their backs. On the right side of these card backs it should either say Spectra-Chrome, Sparkle-Chrome or Tekno-Chrome.

Pikachu on wheels

My friend told me that Volkswagen created a Pikachu car. Do you have a picture of one? Thanks for a great magazine too!

Martin Conklin
Galt, California

Yes, it's true. Volkswagen produced over a dozen special yellow Pikachu Beetle cars for Nintendo. These cars are usually on display at shopping malls when Nintendo or Wizards of the Coast is promoting the Pokémon League, Game Boy or a new Pokémon video game.

The number of criminal incidents involving Pokémon has been on the rise. Some suggest it may have something to do with the rash of Pokémon kidnappings that have been occurring recently. Pokémon breeders believe that to properly raise and evolve a Pokémon, you have to treat it with love and attention. But what happens if a Pokémon isn't treated properly? Will it evolve differently? What's the secret behind this new threat to Pokémon and their trainers? To see what happens when a Pokémon turns bad, check out the new Team Rocket cards.

Some researchers hypothesize that Electrode may actually be a form of energy instead of having an actual body. LV. 24 #101

Playing with the Pros

Complete Your Evolution to Pokémon Tournament Player

By Steven Diamond

Do you think the Pokémon decks you build are the best in your neighborhood? Have you carefully read all of our "Secrets of Evolution" and "TCG Trainer's" articles? Then maybe you're ready to move up to the real test of a Pokémon TCG Master - the challenge of a Pokémon tournament.

Pokémon TCG players can participate in many types of tournaments to test their skills against worthy opponents. Some tournaments are more casual, others are officially-sanctioned. There are also different styles of competition allowing for different cards and decks (although all tourneys require a legal deck of 60 cards). Read on for a glimpse into the multi-faceted world of Pokémon TCG competition!

Casual tournaments - everyone's welcome!

Casual tournaments are held in many places: Pokémon League, youth centers, game shops, comic book shops, and some of the larger toy stores and bookstores such as Toys 'R' Us, Books-a-Million, Zainy Brainy, Noodle Kidoodle and Borders Books. You can usually sign up for a casual tournament on the spot, and the entry fee (if there is one) is generally low.

There is no standard fixed structure to casual tournaments. Some are run as single- elimination tourneys, in which one loss eliminates you from the game. Only players who win their match advance to the next round. Individual matches may be restricted to 25 minutes in length or may not end until a winner emerges -with some matches lasting almost an hour! Other tournaments are run in the "Swiss pairing" style, where all participants play in each round of competition regardless of how often they win or lose. For each round of a Swiss-style tourney, a player is paired with another player who has a similar win-loss record. In this kind of tournament you might lose one or two matches but - based on your record - you could still wind up a finalist and win the tournament! The Swiss style allows even those players who come up short every match to continue playing throughout the entire tournament.

Casual tournaments are a great place to test your skills against worthy opponents.

If you play in a casual tournament you might win a prize, and you will certainly win the respect of your fellow players. However, you won't earn official points that count toward your national standing as a Pokémon player (see the next section on sanctioned tourneys).

If you add any Japanese cards to your deck, you must place each card in an opaque-backed card sleeve.

DCI-sanctioned tournaments - get serious!

If a tournament organizer wants to make the tournament official, he or she can run a DCI-sanctioned tournament. DCI (Duelists Convocation International) is an organization of dedicated game players (and part of Wizards of the Coast) who play Pokémon and other TCG games. DCI sets guidelines for official Pokémon tournaments and keeps track of the winners. When you play in a DCI-tourney, your wins and losses are registered in a database that keeps track of all DCI-sanctioned matches. To participate in a DCI-tourney a player must have an official DCI card, available free at any store that runs DCI tournaments. A DCI card carries a unique number that is yours for life. If you participate in official Pokémon tournaments, your DCI number will allow you to be ranked among all the Pokémon players across the United States and even across the world! DCI-sanctioned tournaments are run according to certain rules (available at the Wizards web site at http://www.wizards.com/DCI/). Usually you must register ahead of time to join these tourneys. On the day of the tournament, when you sign in you'll receive a DCI Player Match Record Card. Don't lose this card! The tournament director needs this to record your wins and losses for the day.

Different Formats of Tournaments

Pokémon tournament organizers decide ahead of time what sort of Pokémon decks the players will be allowed to use. One format is called "Pokémon Limited." In this variety, all players receive the same preconstructed deck (such as Grass Chopper or Brushfire) and several random booster packs at the tournament. Each player then constructs an individualized deck on the spot, using only the cards given out. Many players find this format very restrictive, since you cannot design your own perfect deck but must depend on fate to give you good cards in the booster packs. However, this format does produce a level playing field, since no one can build an expensive deck of rares that other players might not be able to afford.

The more common tournament format is called Pokémon Constructed, where players build their own Pokémon decks ahead of time and bring them to the tournament. Once the tournament begins, you may not change or modify your deck in any way, or you'll be disqualified. If it is a DCI-sanctioned Pokémon Constructed tournament you may only use English-language cards produced by Wizards of the Coast or their non-English equivalents. You can only use non-English cards if the same cards are available in an English version. In other words, you're allowed to use Pokémon cards from Base sets 1 and 2 and the Jungle, Fossil and Team Rocket expansions. Cards from other expansion sets produced in Japan may not be used. If you add any Japanese cards to your deck, you must place each card of your deck in an opaque-backed card sleeve to make all your cards appear uniform. You must also have the English version of the cards available to show to your opponent or the judges if they wish to see the Pokémon's attacks or powers. By the way, polite players tell their opponents that they are using Japanese cards in their decks when they sit down to play - it shows good sportsmanship.

Some tournament organizers will allow the use of Japanese Pokémon cards from the Gym series or the latest NEO expansion in constructed tourneys that are not DCI-sanctioned. These tournaments are definitely more on the wild side and can get pretty complicated, especially since some cards are translated differently in different publications. For the best Japanese-to-English translations of Pokémon cards see the "spoiler lists" produced by Jonathan Ng that have appeared in the Beckett Pokémon Collector. This is a great way for expert players to try out upcoming cards in their decks before they are actually released in English versions.

Informing your opponent that you plan to use Japanese cards in your deck shows good sportsmanship.

On-line Tournaments - the Final Frontier!

In an age when you can play traditional games like chess and canasta on-line with opponents from around the world, it's hardly surprising that Pokémon matches - and even tournamnts - have found a home on the World Wide Web. Of course, you miss the fun of interacting with real-life friends, but many players in small towns around America (and the rest of the world) may have trouble finding enough fellow Poke-fanatics! Playing on-line is a great way to overcome the hurdles of distance and lack of other players, while also testing out your decks against a wide variety of other decks.

To play Pokémon on-line you need three things: Internet access with an on-line chat client, a software application called Apprentice, and Pokémon patch software. Apprentice is a free program officially licensed by Wizards of the Coast and available from Dragon Studios Software at their web site (http://www.dragon-studios.com/apprentice/). Although Apprentice was designed for playing Magic: The Gathering on-line, Pokémon enthusiasts have created a free software patch that installs the information on all the Pokémon cards (Base set through Team Rocket) into Apprentice. Once the software is installed, you can build as many virtual decks within the program as you like and use them to battle your friends on-line. Naturally, your friends must also have this software on their computers and be connected to the Internet as well.

The way it works is as follows: Once you are connected to the Internet you must start up a chat program that allows you to chat (type real-time messages) back and forth with a friend. When you and your friend decide to play Pokémon on-line you both start up Apprentice on your computers. You send a message to your friend letting him or her know your Internet address and he or she simply types in that address into Apprentice on their computer. The program takes care of the rest! Once the two of you are connected you both see the same screen on your computer monitors. When one of you places a card on the virtual table you both can see the card being played. The little card icons do not display pictures of the Pokémon nor do they show the attacks or Pokémon Powers of the cards. Such information is available by holding your cursor over the card icons, and a little window opens telling you that information.

Using Apprentice icons requires you to have most of the Pokémon cards memorized in order to play quickly. But if you're desperate for a game and there's no one into Pokémon for miles around, playing Pokémon TCG on-line may be the way to go!

Game Boy/N64 info

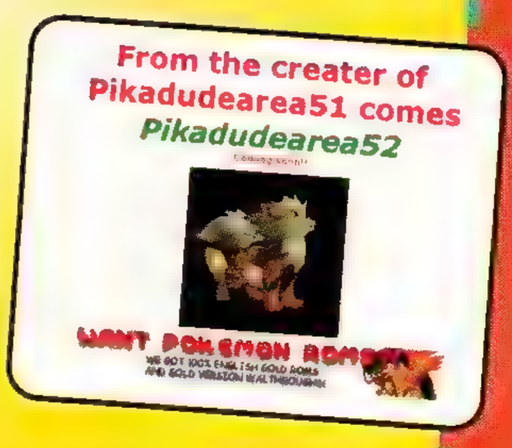
This is the place to go if you're into Pokémon games for Game Boy or Nintendo 64. There's tons of great playing tips, images, cheats, codes, screen shots and walkthroughs for every Pokémon game. Japanese Gold and Silver information is also included.

Trading Card Game

You'll find checklists for three American TCG sets and a list of a few Theme decks. Various pictures of Japanese and American promo cards are available.

TV Episodes

The only TV episode information is a list of episodes from 1 to 104. But, if you're into Pokémon movie pictures, this site is loaded with them.



Final Grade:

Site Name: Fire Pokémon Realm
Address: http://fpr.pokeball.net/main.shtml

Game Boy/N64 info

This site contains Game Boy codes, strategies, walkthroughs, TMs, HMs, and a Pokédex for all 151 Pokémon. There's a review of the Pokémon Snap 64 game too.

Trading Card Game

The Webmaster is accepting deck submissions. There are currently over two dozen TCG decks sent in by Pokémon gaming fans. The site also includes checklists and pictures of Base, Jungle and Fossil card sets.

TV Episodes

Unfortunately there are no cartoon reviews on this site. However, there are over 75 screenshots from different episodes. My favorites are Ash and Pikachu eating, Jenny holding a baby Growlithe and Pikachu getting a bath.

Pokémon 101 PART 2

LEARN HOW TO SOUND LIKE A PRO AT YOUR NEXT POKÉMON TOURNAMENT

By Steven Diamond

Do you get a little confused when you hear players mention words like mulligan or venucenter? Or why one Pokémon player's Haymaker is better than the other player's Rain Dance?

We've compiled a glossary of Pokémon terms to help you win your next tournament. This guide also explains some terms that started with another trading card game, Magic: The Gathering (MTG). We've done this because some of the MTG terms have become standard in the world of Pokémon. This month's glossary focuses on the terms used for advanced and expert play levels.

GAME-PLAYING TERMS

ARCHETYPE

An "archetype" is something that others copy or imitate because it's so good. TCG players refer to strong original deck types as archetypes out of respect for powerful deck strategies and card combinations that win again and again. Popular archetypes include Damage Swap, Haymaker, Rain Dance, and Stall. Create your own original, unbeatable deck and you could become famous as the inventor of a new Pokémon TCG archetype!

DAMAGE SWAP

This is a deck archetype based on Alakazam's awesome Pokémon Power Damage Swap. The Power description reads: "As often as you like during your turn (before your attack) you may move one damage counter from one of your Pokémon to another as long as you don't Knock Out that Pokémon." The Damage Swap strategy is to get high HP Pokémon like Chansey on your Bench so you can continually move damage suffered by your Active Pokémon to the Big Egg. Then, when Chansey is groaning under the weight of 100 or 110 in damage, use Scoop Up to wipe away all that damage and place a refreshed Chansey back on your Bench.

HAYMAKER

One of the original Pokémon deck archetypes, Haymaker got its name from an early mis-translation of Hitmonchan's "Jab" attack. Haymakers focus on fast, non-evolution attackers: Hitmonchan, Farfetch'd, and Electabuzz. When Jungle Pokémon appeared, Scyther became a Haymaker groupie. A good Haymaker begins inflicting damage from the opening turn. Haymakers also depend on energy denial to keep opponent's big evolutions from powering up. Haymakers do not want to see a game go the distance.

RAIN DANCE

A deck archetype that uses (some say abuses) Blastoise' Pokémon Power, Rain Dance. The Power states, "As often as you like during your turn (before your attack) you may attach one Water Energy card to one of your Water Pokémon". This doesn't use up your one Energy card attachment for the turn. For example, if you have 6 Water Energy cards in your hand and you evolve your Wartortle to Blastoise, you can "Rain Dance" all those Water Energies onto any of your Water-type Pokémon. You aren't limited by the rule of "one Energy per turn." How would you like to shower your Gyarados or Articuno with enough Energies to go on the attack in one turn?

Venucenter

This nifty deck strategy focuses on Venusaur's Pokémon Power, Energy Trans. The Power states, "As often as you like during your turn (before your attack) you may take 1 Grass Energy card attached to one of your Pokémon and attach it to a different one." Energy Trans works on both offense and defense. On offense you can power up the Grass Pokémon of your choice for an effective attack. On defense, Energy Trans lets you move all Grass Energy cards to a Pokémon that has no damage counters on it. Then use Pokémon Center to remove all damage counters on Energy-less Pokémon to fully restore your team's health!

Card Advantage

Buried somewhere in your deck are the cards you need to win, and Trainers and deck strategies offer ways to get to those treasures more quickly. Bill, Gambler, Professor Oak and Kangaskhan's "Fetch" attack let you draw from (or "cycle" through) your deck faster than your opponent can, giving you "card advantage."

Decking

At the beginning of your turn you must draw a card from your deck. If your deck's on empty, you lose. This is called "decking." Some Pokémon players build decks with a "decking" strategy in mind. These decks often don't even try to knock out opponent's Pokémon to collect prizes. Their strategy is to stall with big damage absorbing Pokémon and eventually let their opponent run out of cards.

Meta-game

Meta-game describes the overall environment of Pokémon players and decks in your area. First, get to know the types of decks and strategies other players are using at the Pokémon League or tournaments in your area. Create your own custom deck to take advantage of their weaknesses and resist their attacks and you're a "meta-gamer." When you start talking "meta-game," you've become a serious Pokémon player!

Mulligan

No, we're not talking Irish stew here! At the start of the game if you deal yourself seven cards and discover you have no Basic Pokémon in your hand, you declare "Mulligan" and show your hand to your opponent. Then return all your cards to your deck, shuffle and draw seven more. Your opponent has the option to draw two extra cards and they usually do.

Stall

A strategy that depends on your opponent running out of cards or "decking" for you to win. Stall decks include Pokémon with high HP to absorb damage, Scoop Up to revive those Pokémon, and other defense and delay tactics. A few stall decks have been created that actually eliminate all Energy cards in favor of only using Trainers and a few high HP Pokémon to stall to the max! Stall decks aim for long games and are criticized for being boring to play against.

Wall

A wall is a Pokémon with high HP or special powers (like Mr. Mime's "Invisible Wall") that absorbs damage during the game so you have time to build up your first or second stage evolution attacker on your Bench. Walls are often temporary and disposable- the self-sacrificing heroes of your deck!

Pokémon Price Guide & Checklist

HOW TO USE

What's Listed
Products listed in the Price Guide typically 1) are produced by licensed manufacturers, 2) are widely available and 3) have market activity on single items.

What the Columns Mean
The LO and HI columns reflect current retail selling ranges. The HI column on the right generally represents the full retail selling price. The LO column on the left generally represents the lowest price one would expect to find with extensive shopping.

What the Arrows Mean
Up arrows denote prices that went up since the last issue. Down arrows denote prices that went down since the last issue. Arrows don't mean a card or set is "going up" or "going down."

Grading
All cards and toys in the Price Guide are based on Mint condition. Damaged cards are generally sold for 25 to 75 percent of Mint value. Toys that are loose (out of package) are generally sold for 50 percent of the listed price.

Currency
This Price Guide is intended to reflect the entire North American market. All listed prices are in U.S. dollars.

Legend
(C) - Common card. These cards contain a black dot in the lower right corner.

(R) - Rare card. These cards contain a star in the lower right corner.

(U) - Uncommon card. These cards contain a diamond in the lower right corner.

(UER) - Uncorrected error. This card does not have a corrected version.

(NNO) - No number. This card does not contain a number in the bottom right corner.

(HOLO) - Holographic card. Some collectors also call these Holofoil cards.

The Secrets of Evolution

Colorless Critters of Pokémon

By Steven Diamond

One of the secrets all great Pokémon players know is that Colorless Pokémon are valuable additions to just about any deck. Why? First of all, Colorless Pokémon can use any type of Energy to power up their attacks. Second, all Colorless Pokémon have resistance either to fighting or psychic attacks, making them good defensive allies when you run into those type Pokémon. Finally, no Pokémon has resistance to Colorless type attacks. For example, when a Persian Pounces it does 30 damage, period. By the same token, no Pokémon has weakness to Colorless attacks, so you never get the thrill of seeing your attacks double their damage.

There Be Dragons Here!

One of the strongest Colorless evolutions begins with a rather weak Dragon Pokémon, Dratini. With only 40 HP, Dratini is a sitting duck if that's all you find in your opening draw. Dratini's single attack, Pound, is worth 10 damage and is reasonable trade for one Energy of any color. But you'll want to evolve the little dragon to its first stage evolution as soon as possible.

Dragonair is a big leap into serious Pokémon playing. Delicate Dratini immediately gains strength to become an 80 HP monster. Dragonair's Slam attack requires three Energies and gives you the chance of inflicting 60 damage if you're lucky enough to flip two coins and get two heads. Otherwise, the attack is worth zero. Dragonair's second attack, Hyper Beam, is really sweet. Although it only causes 20 damage (for a whopping 4 Energies!), it also allows you to choose one Energy card attached to the defending Pokémon and discard it. It's like playing an Energy Removal each time you attack. It's a very disruptive attack, and a favorite part of my wife Mary's strategy -very effective!

With the Fossil set, Dragonair achieved its highest evolution, Dragonite. One of the "walk-on" stars of Pokémon: the First Movie, Dragonite enjoys a solid 100 HP and increases the potential of Slam to 80 damage. Dragonite's Pokémon Power, Step In, allows you to promote Dragonite as your Active Pokémon once during your turn for zero retreat cost. All in all, the family of Dragons can be quite a threat.

Magical Monsters

The Fairy family, Clefairy and Clefable, look like cute little marshmallows, but looks can be deceiving. Like Dratini, Clefairy is weak with only 40 HP to protect itself. No one plays Clefairy for it's first attack, Sing, which requires a coin toss of heads to put the defending Pokémon asleep. Clefairy's real strength lies in Metronome, its second attack. For 3 Energies you get to choose one of the defending Pokémon's attacks and copy it without paying the Energy costs or discarding Energies required for the copied attack. For example, when Clefairy copies Charizard's Fire Spin attack, it doesn't have to discard two Energy cards to use it.

Clefairy's evolution to Clefable (with a stronger 70 HP) allows the Fairy Pokémon to power up Metronome for only one Energy. Clefable's second attack, Minimize, is purely defensive, reducing any attacks on Clefable by 20. It's not much to get excited about. Metronome is the real goods. Remember that no matter what Energy type your Fairies are copying for their attacks, Metronome attacks are always counted as Colorless attacks. You cannot take advantage of the defending Pokémon's weakness.

Cool Cats

Overcome your distrust of Meowth, even if it's a naughty member of TV's Team Rocket. Meowth's only attack is Pay Day. For two Energies the cat causes 10 damage plus the possibility of drawing a card from your deck if you get heads on a coin toss. With 50 HP this Scratch Cat Pokémon has a fair chance to survive to its first stage evolution.

Meowth's evolution to Persian gives it a touch of class and a decent pair of attacks. Persian's Scratch attack (2 Energies) causes 20 damage. Attach a third Energy to your Classy Cat Pokémon and its Pounce attack does 30 damage and reduces any attack on Persian during the next turn by 10 damage, a good combination of offense and defense.

Colorless Soloists

Tauros, the 60 HP Wild Bull Pokémon, is one tough-looking beast with attacks to match. Stomp does at least 20 damage for two Energies and an additional 10 damage with a coin toss of heads. Tauros' second attack, Rampage, will make your opponent stop and do a little math before attacking. This attack does 20 damage plus another 10 damage for each damage counter on Tauros. Since the Wild Bull can hold 50 damage without getting knocked out, Rampage has the potential for doing 70 damage. Your best strategy is to use Scoop Up on Tauros as soon as possible to save your pet bull!

What can you say about a Pokémon that does absolutely nothing but eat and sleep? Snorlax is big in every way. The Sleeping Pokémon has 90 HP (very good), but requires 4 Energies to retreat (very bad). Its only attack, Body Slam, produces a measly 30 damage for a whopping 4 Energies with a possibility of Paralyzing the defending Pokémon with a coin toss of heads. Even with its Thick Skinned Pokémon Power preventing it from becoming Asleep, Confused or Paralyzed, Snorlax isn't the most effective member of your team.

Last, and definitely least, comes poor little Porygon. I just can't imagine what use anybody has for this Virtual Pokémon. I recently saw it appear in a deck at the Pokémon League where it was included simply as a joke. We'll have to wait until the Team Rocket Porygon is released. At least that Porygon has an attack that causes some damage! Until then, Porygon stays on its virtual Bench.

Dangerous dragons, fluffy fairies, cool cats and quirky characters - Pokémon's Colorless critters are actually a colorful lot!

LET THE BATTLES BEGIN

How to win big at Pokémon Stadium.

By Jason R. Rich

Now that you've helped Ash find, collect and train all 151 types of Pokémon when you experienced Pokémon Red, Blue and/or Yellow on the Game Boy, it's finally possible to see all of your favorite Pokémon characters in full-color and in 3-D when you play Pokémon Stadium on the N64.

Any or all of the Pokémon you trained on the Game Boy (including their specialty moves, level, HMs, and TMs) can be transferred to the N64 using the Transfer Pak which comes with the Pokémon Stadium game.

While Pokémon Stadium doesn't have a storyline, this is a Pokémon battle game for between one and four players. When you experience the Stadium mode, for example, you can participate in the Poké Cup, Prime Cup, Pika Cup or Petit Cup. Sorry, but Mew can only participate in Prime Cup battles. In this one player mode, you can enter up to six of your favorite Pokémon, but only choose three of them per battle. By winning each battle in the tournament, you'll win that Cup.

TIP: When transferring Pokémon between the Game Boy and N64, keep in mind that once you move a Pokémon to the N64, it will be erased from your Game Boy cart. If you want that Pokémon back in your Game Boy, you'll need to transfer it back.

STRATEGY: During a Pokémon battle, you can run, change Pokémon or battle, just like when playing the Game Boy adventure. If you choose to fight, use the right trigger on the controller to see that Pokémon's available moves and the yellow buttons on the controller to choose the move you want to execute during your turn.

TIP: When two Pokémon are engaged in battle, the Pokémon who is rated with the greatest Speed is the one who gets to launch its attack first. Each battle continues until you either Run or cause all of your opponent's Pokémon to faint.

STRATEGY: There are several different types of Pokémon (Normal, Fire, Water, Electric, Grass, Ice, Flying, Rock, Bug, Ghost, etc.). As a Pokémon trainer, it's your job to determine your Pokémon's strengths and weaknesses based upon its type. Likewise, if you know your opponent's weaknesses, you'll be able to exploit them with your Pokémon's strengths. For example, a Fighting-type Pokémon will be extra powerful against Normal, Ice and Rock type Pokémon. Also, Water-type Pokémon are particularly powerful against Fire, Rock and Ground type Pokémon. During each match, choose a Pokémon whose type you know is superior to your opponent, and make sure your Pokémon is ranked at a higher level. This virtually guarantees victory.

TIP: To create the strongest and most powerful Pokémon, catch'em early when playing Pokémon Red, Blue or Yellow (when their levels are very low). Spend time building up each Pokémon's level over time, then transfer it to the N64.

TIP: When choosing which six Pokémon to include on your team, make sure you select many types of Pokémon capable of performing different attacks. Try to avoid too much overlap. This will help you prepare to face any opponent. Just before a match begins, you'll see your opponent's Pokémon line-up and be able to compare it to yours.

STRATEGY: If you're fortunate enough to launch a first attack in a battle, use one of your fastest and strongest Pokémon, so you can weaken your opponent quickly. If you're battling a Pokémon you know is stronger or faster than yours, try using Hypnosis or a Confuse Ray, for example, to slow down the more powerful Pokémon.

Strategy: When your favorite Pokémon are still stored on your Game Boy, you can give'em a major power boost by feeding them Calcium, Carbos, HP Ups, Protein, Iron and other special items before transferring them to the N64. The Department Store within Celadon City is a great place to stock up on these power-up items. If you need extra cash, earn it by battling the Elite Four several times at the end of your Game Boy adventure.

TIP: After you've registered all 151 types of Pokémon in the Hall of Fame when playing Pokémon Stadium, your reward will be access to a very special Pokémon, called Amnesia Psyduck.

STRATEGY: If you have a Pokémon who has become very weak from battle, yet you still have to defeat several strong opposing Pokémon, consider having your weak Pokémon perform an explosion or self-destruct move (if available). While your Pokémon will faint as a result of using it, your stronger opponent will most likely faint as well.

STRATEGY: To reveal the secret tournament against Mewtwo in the Stadium mode, you'll need to first win all ten trophies in this mode. This will cause the VS Mewtwo tournament option to show up on the map screen. In this battle mode, you can choose six (not three) of your most powerful Pokémon. Bug-type Pokémon or your own Mewtwo will work well. After beating Mewtwo, let the game credits roll, but pay close attention to the screen. You'll gain access to yet another secret game mode - the R-2 Bonus Mode.
